

ABSTRACT

A turbine rotor repair method capable of forming a repair part by applying a deposit welding to a rotor material, the deposit welding being a thin deposit welding with a high deposition rate, wherein the repair part is formed by stacking beads by the thin deposit
5 welding, and the thin deposit welding with the high deposition rate is performed by a submerged arc welding using a conductive flux.